Jesus Was a Homeboy

by

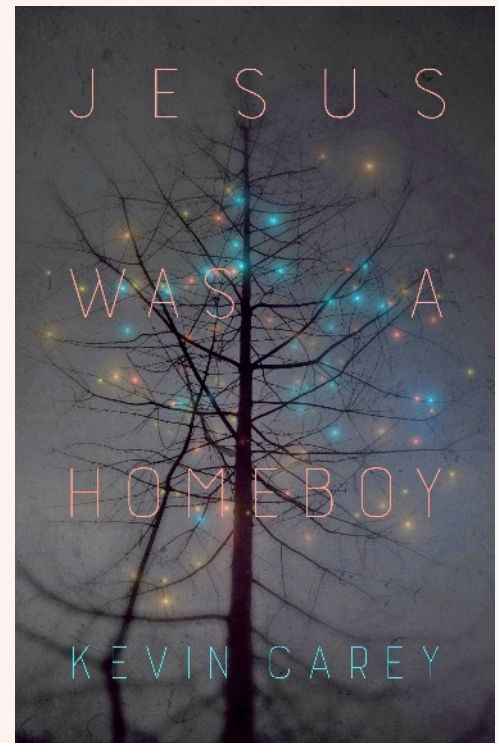

Kevin Carey

In Jesus Was a Homeboy, Carey returns to the urban beach front, the dusty gymnasiums, the barrooms, and the restaurants that have defined the chapters of his life. It's an honest reflection, with all its flaws and regrets, highlighting the drama of everyday – aging, acknowledging past mistakes, and wishing things had been different – yet celebrating and holding on to those moments that make us appreciate what we have.

Kevin Carey teaches at Salem State University. He has published two previous books, The One Fifteen to Penn Station (CavanKerry Press, 2012) and The Beach People (Red Bird Chapbooks, 2014). Kevin is also a playwright and a filmmaker. His 2012 co-directed documentary film about New Jersey poet Maria Mazziotti Gillan is called All That Lies Between Us.

A poet's look at the hard lessons of growing older and of wanting the things that are beyond our reach
